Waking Up.

The intelligence from Washington, to-day, that the executive and congress are at last aroused to the perils which surround the country, will be hailed with satisfaction. The debate in the senate on the question of employing negroes in the army, and using every other means necessary to crush out the rebellion, was of the most interesting character. When such an inveterate hunker as Rice of Minnesota takes this ground, and pitches into the border, state policy with earnestness and good will, there is hope that the conservatives have got their eyes open at last. The events on the Chickasaw have startled the sleepy old senate, and before the week is out we may expect that "radical" measures will be adopted by that body. Let them come—the country is ripe for the exercise of every power and all the means necessary to wipe out the rebellion and slavery with it.

It is intimated, too, that the president is about to issue a proclamation directing his generals, to receive all loyal men into the army, white or black, who will fight for the Union. Washington did so—Jackson welcomed such men, why should not Abraham Lincoln, now, when the necessities of the case are greater than at any other time? The "signs of the times" indicate that a new policy is about to be inaugurated.—War, unrelenting and pitiless war, is to be waged upon the infernal traitors who have so nearly deprived us of a country, and who have slain so many of the brave and good. Let us hope for it, and when it comes, let the people clap their hands for joy, in the new born certainty that our beloved land shall be saved, and come forth from the fires of civil war to be clothed with freedom as with a garment.

A SIGNIFICANT PARAGRAPH.—The New York Tribune, of July 7th, says:—The rapid and mysterious movements of Secretary Seward, just before the call for more soldiers, have given rise to a suspicion that it is not altogether the state of the war against the rebels that caused the demand, but that the remote possibility of foreign interference had something to do with it. Of course the rebel sympathizers will make out of the seven days' fight before Richmond a splendid triumph for the rebels, and under its prestige bring their weightiest influence to bear upon the English and French governments, urging them to intervene. It is naturally argued that, in case either government should undertake the job, the 300,000 men just called for would be very handy to have on hand.

THE RECENT BATTLES BEFORE RICHMOND.—We give below the names of the localities of the various battles which have been fought by the contending armies before Richmond:

Thursday, June 26—Battle of Mechanicsville.

Friday, June 27—Battle of Gaines' Mill.

Saturday, June 28—Battle of the Chickasaw.

Sunday, June 29—Battle of Peach Orchard; battle of Savage's Station.

Monday, June 30—Battle of White Oak Swamp; battle of White Oak Creek; battle of Charles City Cross Roads.

Tuesday, July 1—Battle of Turkey Bend.

"Warning" to Rebel Sympathizers.

From the Monroe Sentinel.

At a meeting of the citizens of Monroe, held at the court house, July 8th, 1863, D. W. Ball, esq., was called to the chair, and W. W. Wright, chosen secretary. The meeting was called to order, and was addressed in a spirited manner by T. E. Eaton, R. Bartlett, F. Q. Ball, L. Davenport; each taking "clatter" at the rebels and traitors in particular, and secession sympathizers generally.

On motion of F. Q. Ball a committee of five persons was appointed by the chair to draft resolutions expressive of the sense and object of the meeting.

Messrs. F. Q. Ball, L. Davenport, Dr. S. Porter, Joseph Patterson and Allen Wood were appointed said committee.

The following preamble and resolutions—which were unanimously adopted, were reported by said committee:

WHEREAS: Morris Rosa, having served six months in a rebel army; having contributed a large sum from his private funds for the purpose of buying Sharp's rifles with which to arm rebels; and, also, having come north, under the protection of the stars and stripes, has here expressed treasonable sentiments and manifested his sympathy for the present rebellion, by saying that he would rather lose his right arm than fight his southern brethren, therefore, Resolved, That the said Morris Rosa be allowed twenty-four hours in which to leave the county, failing to do which he remains at his peril.

Resolved, That "any other man" uttering like sentiments shall not be tolerated in our midst.

Ordered that the Monroe Sentinel be requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting.

The meeting then adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

D. W. BALL, Chairman.

W. W. WRIGHT, Secretary.

A letter passed through the post office the other day, directed to "Derry Ann," [Darien], Walworth county; another to "Janesville, La Crosse, Illinois."

Government has suspended the order discharging General Fremont's staff. It is possible that the Pathfinder may be heard from again ere long.

The Arrest of Col. Paine.

In the correspondence between Colonel Paine, of the 4th regiment, and his superiors, in relation to the order for turning fugitive slaves out of his camp, the former, after copying the law directing officers not to return fugitives, says:

It is true that the order of Gen. Williams does not in terms require regimental commanders "to employ their guards or sentinels for the purpose of returning fugitives," but it is equally true that the order in effect requires nothing else. For it is notorious that the regimental camps are watched, not only by pretended owners, but also by men who hunt for pay, into whose grasp the fugitives will certainly fall. The very instant the guard thrusts them over the lines. Within my own personal knowledge, many fugitives have been received aboard our transports at different places in this state, by Gen. Williams, and have, upon close interrogation, given him important military information. Such of these have not already been returned to their owners, may still be in the camps of this brigade.—What will be their fate if delivered up to claimants or hunters, is easy to predict. It seems to me that while their surrender would be in palpable violation of the law, it would also be subject to the gravest objections.

The order of Gen. Williams forces upon me an alternative which is peculiarly painful, because with me "obedience to orders" has always been in practice as well theory; a fundamental military maxim. I am compelled either to disobey him or defy the sovereign power of the republic. In this matter I cannot hesitate. No punishment for disobedience to this order can be so intolerable as would be the consciousness of having violated the law, by compelling my guards to return to vindictive rebels, fugitives whose information has been sought and used for the benefit of our arms. While I command the 4th regiment, Wisconsin volunteers, they cannot, with my consent, be employed in the violation of the law, for the purpose of returning fugitives to rebels.

A Visit to Col. Paine's Landing and the Gunboats.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune, HARRISON'S LANDING, July 2, Wednesday noon, July 2.

Five minutes after the general left I succeeded in getting a small boat to take me ashore, the rain coming down in torrents at the time. As we approached the wharf, I noticed the land to the left was a dead level and was white with the covers of our baggage trains, which were here drawn up in an immense solid body, which we had taken to be tents as seen from the steamer's deck. To the right the land rose gently from the river until it reached an elevation of perhaps thirty feet. Up along this elevated plain and all along the banks of the river our sick and wounded men stood shivering in the rain, without tents or knapsacks, or arms. Here and there a single Shelby tent was visible, and also a sprinkling of white roofed baggage wagons. The scene presented as I landed defied all description. Under some trees which lay around in clusters, our men were crouched. They looked as if they were more dead than alive; they were covered to the crown of their heads with mud, their faces and clothes were literally caked, while their shoes and boots had several pounds of mud stuck to them. Whole regiments were, immersed to their knees, many up to their waists in the yellow mire, with branches of trees and pieces of sticks washing and scraping off the dirt. Cavalry men were out so far, trying to get a "clean wash," that the water reached their armpits, while they vigorously scraped themselves and their weary steeds; many of the men had not had a dry biscuit for 24 hours. I met an officer who was wounded in the eye, his face covered with blood and mud. He was vainly offering $5 for something to eat. I moved up the hill through awful pools of mud, sinking down to the knees at every step. I passed a house which had the appearance of having been deserted by its owner, as there were no doors or windows visible. This house was so crowded with sick and wounded, poor miserable men, that a doctor who came up while I was there could not possibly get in. A great crowd was assembled around the doors, who seemed to envy the more fortunate ones inside.

On the top of the hill there was rather a fine house, with plenty of out houses. This was our general hospital, and it was crammed to its utmost capacity. I conversed with many brave fellows who had fought their way with our army through hosts of rebels. They were not dismayed or frightened. Quite the contrary. In a calm and cool manner—not noticing the torrents of rain falling on their heads—there they stood telling of the vast hordes of rebels who they were outnumbered. I stood in the centre of many a great group of privates who gathered around me to learn the news from the rest of the world—for they saw by my clean lines that I got among them by some other route than Savage Station. I did not hear from these men one single word of murmur or complaint. They said, "We are ready when re-enforcements arrive to go at them again." At this time there was a schooner at the end of the wharf, and a gang of at least three hundred contrabands were in line, each having a box of biscuit on his shoulder, carrying them ashore. The river along the wharf is very shallow, and only one vessel of light draught can come alongside the end of the wharf. The portion of the supply fleet which had arrived lay scattered in the river some distance off. The enemy were throwing shells into our lines while I was on shore, which were quickly responded to by our men. About 12 o'clock I took a small boat to visit the gunboat fleet, in company with Lieut. Col. Daniel Elliot, Middle-Camp, of Maine, and Dr. L. Munson. The first named Monitor lay in the middle of the river, and as the Lieutenant commanding was an old pupil of Col. Elliot, at the Colonel's suggestion we visited her first. We were received on board by Mr. L. N. Stoddard, sailing-master, who was then officer of deck. Mr. Stoddard, in the kindest manner, pointed out to us the marks made by the guns of Fort Darling during the late conflict, which were, as he said, "mere scratches." The Lieutenant commanding, Mr. William Flyn of Maine, soon came on deck. With him we went on the tower; went below to the engine room, steering room, ward room, and, in fact, all over the vessel. While in the engine-room, which was rather hot, the Lieutenant set the flues in motion, which, in a second, made the place as cool as could be desired.

The Monitor had steam up continually during the last four months. Having thanked the lieutenant for his courtesy, we went on board the Galena. We were received by the captain in the most courteous manner, and shown all around the vessel by Sailing Master S. B. Washburne. The boys were everywhere at work piling up grape, canister and round shot near the guns. Just as we left, Gen. McClellan boarded the Galena. He came by himself, in a boat which was pulled by sixteen men. He staid only a second. He passed close by the Monitor, and boarded the steamer Express, which was loaded with ammunition, and which lay only a short distance from the Galena. He then went ashore. About this time I noticed two separate groups of signal officers on the top of the hill, one on the left and the other on the right of the house. Those on the roof were signaling to the army lines in their rear, and those on the caves to the gunboats on the river. A general commotion was visible everywhere. There was smart firing ashore and we expected a battle every minute.

The Express, which Gen. McClellan had visited, moved up and lay outside some five or six barges, and commenced unloading her ammunition. The gunboats all shifted their positions. The Monitor moved down the river to protect the rear, and in a quarter of an hour she and others were beehiving forth into the woods before them.

Four o'clock, p. m.—The firing has ceased, the transportation of stores and provisions of all kinds is going on vigorously, and large transports, loaded down with sick and wounded, are steaming away down stream. The mail boat has received an order to be ready in an hour. All the mails she brought with her she carries back, with orders to bring up from Fortress Monroe headquarters mail only. The paymasters that came up all return—so our men will have to wait a little longer for their letters and well earned cash.

WUAT PROSPECTS.—While in the town of Verona, yesterday, Mr. Joseph Flick informed us that his wheat was entirely ruined by rust. Other fields in the vicinity, he said, were rendered utterly worthless by the same cause. We saw some fields that looked well, but we fear the wheat crop of Dane county will fall much below a fair standard. The rust the fly and bug, have been industriously at work.—Madison Patriot.

Much the same may be said of Rock county. While there are excellent fields of wheat, in some localities, in others covering the largest space, it is light and scattering, with short heads. From all the information we can gather, there will not be an average crop of wheat in this county. The causes of this partial failure are fly, chinch bug and dry weather.

The latest reports at Fortress Monroe indicate that Col. Van Wyck is not killed, but is seriously wounded.

Last Night's Report.

New York, July 9.

The Post says it is probable congress will pass an act that the tax bill will go into effect until the 21st of July.

WASHINGTON, July 9.

The correspondence between the war department and Gen. McClellan was transmitted to the house in answer to a resolution of inquiry. Gen. McClellan says, in the course of his explanation: those who have originated the false statements concerning the White House and spring are the cause in which it is fighting, they have impressed it on the surgeon general and caused him to make official representations which on examination prove to be unfounded. In fact, which are disrespectful to his superior officer. They have unnecessarily occupied the attention of the secretary of war and have interrupted the commander and medical director of this army in the midst of the most arduous duties.

A meeting of the Democratic State Convention was held at the Delavan House, to-day, Del. Richmond in the chair, and Peter Gogger, secretary. In accordance with the invitation of the committee a large number of prominent democrats and Union men from all sections of the state, were present. An advisory meeting was held at 2 o'clock to give an opportunity for those gentlemen to express their views as to the duty of the democratic organization at this time. Speeches were made by May or Wood, Jas. Brodley, Calvert Constock, Senator P. S. G. Hildreth, J. P. Purdy and others, all equally in favor of immediate and sufficient reinforcement for the army of the Potomac, in favor of the unconditional support of the government, while maintaining the right of all patriotic citizens, to oppose the errors, corruptions and weakness in the administration of that government, and opposition to foreign interference.

Boston, July 9.

One hundred rebel prisoners from before Richmond, including 10 officers, arrived here, to-day, and were sent to Fort Warren.

DETROIT, July 9.

The Detroit Advertiser and Tribune, this evening, contains an interesting letter from Brig. Gen. Granger, who commanded the advance, after the evacuation of Corinth, completely refuting the infamous charges made by Beauregard in his letter to the Mobile News.

WASHINGTON, July 9.

SENATE.—Mr. Foster, from the judiciary committee, reports back the bill to change the place of holding the circuit court of the United States, so far as the district of west Tennessee is concerned. Mr. Foster also reported from the same committee, the bill amendatory to the act to prohibit the slave trade. The bill authorizes the president to make arrangements with foreign governments, and especially with Denmark, for the colonization of captured Africans.

Mr. King, from the military committee, reported a bill for the employment of persons of African descent in building entrenchments, and for other war purposes. On motion of Mr. Sherman, the resolution in relation to a quorum of the senate was taken up.

Mr. Sherman urged the passage of a resolution as a matter of necessity, to relieve the senate from the danger of being left without a quorum any time by the withdrawal of one or two members. He argued that there could be no constitutional objection to the bill.

Mr. Carlisle argued against the passage of the resolution, as giving to two or three states power to legislate for the whole country. This was entirely against the provisions of the constitution.

The president pro tem had a paper read expressing his views on the subject, arguing that according to the constitution no state could be destroyed—that the quorum provided for in the constitution meant a majority of the whole number of senators from all the states. He cited various cases of the action of the senate as precedents in favor of this question.

WASHINGTON, July 9.

Special to Chicago Tribune.—The Senate had a long session to-day on the policy of arming the negroes. Preston King moved to amend Mr. Grimes' amendment by striking out all but the provisions in regard to nations, &c., and insert two sections of the bill introduced by him, authorizing the President to receive into the service of the United States for the purpose of constructing entrenchments, or other camp service or labor for which they are fitted, persons of African descent, and such persons shall be enrolled under proper regulations; and where no man of color of African race renders such service, his mother, wife or children shall be forever free, and appropriating ten millions to carry this into effect.

Messrs. Saulsbury and Carlisle opposed such attempts to elevate the miserable negro.

upon the border states, and asked, why don't you listen to us who know more about the slaves than you do? At least, he was willing that negroes should be used for loading cannons and swabbing and firing on certain occasions; but he prayed that these senators, if they had any regard for innocent women and children, not to arm the blacks.

Mr. Rice at once replied that he regretted that the senator had found no subjects for his eloquence among Indians at Pea Ridge, or that he had not come down later and denounced the use of the maddening compound of gunpowder whiskey at Richmond; but these were only actions of the rebels. The senator's eloquence was reserved for other purposes.

Mr. Davis interrupting asked, "Do the barbarities of rebels justify barbarities in us?"

Mr. Rice continued, "I will answer the senator very briefly. If a stranger had entered the chamber during the senator's speech he would have supposed him to be an ambassador from the southern confederacy."

Mr. Carrol Davis excitedly said, "It is not so." Several senators called out, "Order." This little passage between an old Breckinridge democrat and a border state congressman excited great attention.

Mr. Davis lost his temper and got decidedly the worst of the debate.

Mr. Rice resumed, "Let the senator say what he pleases 'he will not discompose me.'"

Mr. Davis (crabbedly):—"Well, don't misrepresent me."

Mr. Rice replied that, "he had represented him fairly, and given the same spirit of his speech," and then went on urging the necessity of putting forth our every power. The senator was willing negroes should, in case of necessity, be used for loading and swabbing, and even firing cannon. Why not, he asked the senator, let them be used for loading and swabbing and firing muskets?

It is generally believed that congress will adjourn next Monday. Little business remains except the confiscation and tariff bills, which are in the hands of the conference committee, and Harris' provision of government bill, which still hangs fire in the senate.

Some law authorizing employment of negroes in military duties is pretty certain to be crowded through before adjournment. The republicans seemed unanimous on the subject, and late reverses before Richmond have opened the eyes of many a conservative democrat and border state member of the confederacy. The feeling against the present easy mode of conducting the war is universal.

The recent course of the New York Herald in threatening the president with being deposed if he don't displace Stanton, creates great indignation. To-day's Republican calls for its suppression, and the feeling is general that the suppression of little country papers for half what the Herald pays, while it goes unpunished, is intolerable.

It is announced that we have now at Fort Rial quit a division of Pope's army. Gen. Pope took the field to-day.

Maj. Gen. Sigel and staff and Brig. Gen. Welsh are in town.

Sen. Dixon telegraphs from Connecticut that they will fill up their quota of volunteers under the new call with alacrity.

Carroll Davis introduced an exceedingly stringent bill punishing all who have in any way given aid or comfort to the rebellion, even by expressing a wish for its success to their friends, by fine or imprisonment. It is hoped by some that such a bill as this, to secure a jury trial to all rebels and avoid any confiscation of slaves and property, will be passed.

Preston King's bill for enlisting negroes which the Senate debated this afternoon, was approved by every member of the military committee before its introduction. It liberates all slaves so enlisted.

Fessenden, Wilson and other Senators bitterly denounced Mr. Stanton's press censorship.

It is supposed now that one object of the War Department's temporary suppression of news about the Richmond battles was to delay the news getting to England. It now turns out that even this was a complete failure, as it is now known that the rebels had supplied Baltimore secessionists with full files of Richmond papers up to last Saturday, which were sent off by the last steamer to each of the prominent London and Paris journals.

To-Day's Report.

[Reported Exclusively for the Daily Gazette.]

MORNING DISPATCHES.

PHILADELPHIA, July 9.

Special correspondence of Forney's Press, dated United States steamer sloop Brooklyn, June 28th, says: All hands were called up in the morning to attack the batteries and the city of Vicksburg. The first gun fired was at one o'clock. The firing was intense. The Hartford, Richmond and gunboats have passed the batteries and city without silencing them. The Brooklyn received orders not to pass a battery without silencing it and she remains below. The loss on the Hartford was one killed and seven wounded, on the Richmond the master's mate was killed, some wounded.

distance, who made no effort to dispute the passage of the stream. Our pickets now extend to within two miles of Warrington Springs.

A prominent citizen of Middletown was arrested, yesterday, carrying a rebel mail from Winchester to Richmond. Daily communication is had with Richmond from nearly all the towns in the valley.

The petitions in the case of Vallandigham have been reported back by the committee with the recommendation that they lie upon the table, no evidence being submitted with them, and no directions to enforce into facts being given by the house, the committee on judiciary could not act otherwise.

WASHINGTON, July 9.

Special to World.—An important manifesto in the shape of a proclamation from the president, giving the future policy of the administration on the great question of the hour, is not improbable, at an early day. Mr. Lincoln has been waited upon by several senators and members of the house, and
